STANDING THE TEST OF TIME

After 28 years, the Cambrian Slate roof of Delme James' home in Wales remains as solid as the day it was first laid, a mark of its quality. Redland is celebrating the 30th anniversary of Cambrian Slate in 2016, and Delme was an early adopter of the product.

Operating his own construction company in Wales, Delme is well aware of the importance of quality roof tiles as they help to protect his client investments, as well as his own. Cambrian is made from over 60% recycled Welsh slate making it an obvious choice for use in the Welsh countryside and one that Delme has made for several roofing projects during his time in the construction industry.

"I began using Redland products, in particular the Cambrian Slate, initially on self-build jobs in Wales. I was really impressed with the quality of the products and eventually chose to use them for my own home that I was building in Carmarthen," Delme said.

Because of Cambrian's unique three-point fixing system, the slates are suitable for even the most exposed areas of the country, a feature Delme welcomed in Carmarthen where harsh weather can have a greater effect than elsewhere in the country.

"We live in a very exposed area of Wales, and the weather can have a huge impact on the roof condition. We needed a tile that was going to last against the elements. The last thing I wanted was to fix a tile that would fly off of the roof every time we had a gale," Delme said.

"It's a very good tile. Recently we have been using them more and more for clients. They are excellent quality and obviously made to last."

Redland Cambrian Slates embody the beauty and character of natural slate, manufactured in Wales with over 60% recycled Welsh slate. Interlocking, they are made to meet the latest performance requirements and, whilst light in weight, Cambrian's unique three-point fixing makes them suitable for even the most exposed sites.
