KEEPING GOOD COUNCIL

As part of a North London regeneration project by Enfield Council Housing, contractors used Cambrian Slate to recreate the classic aesthetic of the houses, while providing the quality and cost efficiency of modern slate.

Several of the houses on Church Street are original Victorian-era properties, and the rest have been designed in a similar style. The unique visual character of the neighbouring properties meant that the Cambrian Slate in Slate Grey was eventually chosen, to provide a like-for-like replacement to the original roof.

Manufactured from over 60% recycled Welsh slate, Cambrian provided the Church Street properties with the traditional look of a Welsh slate, a common historic roofing material, and a key feature in the regions' aesthetic vernacular.

Southern Counties Roofing Contractors was tasked with erecting the new roof. Richard Lowe, the Project Manager in charge of the Church Street works knew this would not be a straightforward job: "The council was very keen to keep to the original style and spirit of the buildings. Cambrians fit the brief. Enfield loves Redland tiles and the service that comes with them."

Cambrian Slates are designed to weather over time, mimicking the ageing process of natural slate. Cambrian Slate tops the Redland product range it both looks and performance, and can be laid as low as 15°, ideal for the non-uniform nature of an original Victorian roof.

"Every single tile used in our jobs for the last three years has been Redland. We love using them," Richard adds.

Redland Cambrian Slates embody the beauty and character of natural slate, manufactured in Wales with over 60% recycled Welsh slate. Interlocking, they are made to meet the latest performance requirements and, whilst light in weight, Cambrian's unique three-point fixing makes them suitable for even the most exposed sites.
